THE UNDEAD MEDIC

ARCHETYPE

You should have perma-died in the mining wars. You did die. The rejuvenation tank controls were knocked out as the TGA blew up your rebel hideout and killed everyone who could have pulled you out in time. Instead you were left soaking until the liquids expired, became poisonous and killed you. You continued to soak until they became acidic and burned the flesh off your bones. And yet still you soaked—for decades—until, somehow, the tank entered a new state of decay and miraculously started to rebuild what it had destroyed. When you woke up a month ago, it was to a different Zira-Ka, without the TGA. You also woke up to a new you. Something happened to you in that tank, and you are going to figure out what it is.

Special: You are tall and very muscular.

†: you have an old imperial kin-gun (d6/6)

ARCHETYPE BOON

When you treat someone on the verge of death, you may space one of the patient's nanite abilities or formulae. Let a die decide which one you get. You also have Shadow +3.
